

STAR MAPS IN THE LONG BARROWS OF ANCIENT WESSEX

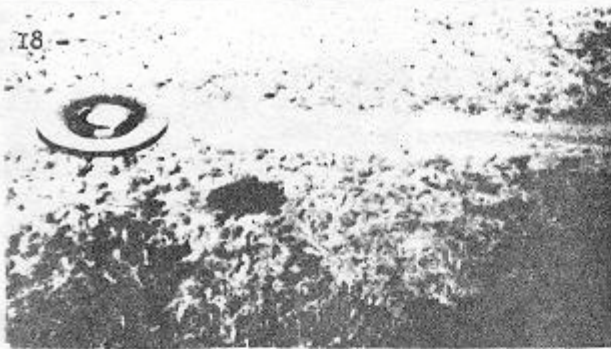

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

"The bright star appeared to Tirawa and taught him the rituals of the sacrifice. When other men were created by the stars he became their Chief and taught all that the bright star had taught him. Together they built a circular camp which was laid out in the same order as the stars are fixed in Heaven, in memory of the way in which the World was created."

The above legend comes from the Pawnee Indians who reside between Mexico and the Mississippi River, North America. It is but one of many world-wide legends of Creation. The father and mother of Tirawa are the Sun and Moon, and Tirawa is, in effect, the Red Indian Adam. Throughout the World we find an ancient passion for the stars. Cave drawings, legends, script and papyrus are literally covered with representations of cosmological tales and gods; and almost all legendary and mythical heroes had their affinity with various heavenly bodies. Why was it necessary to use stars, planets and other outer space objects in order to make heroes of our mythological deities? Why not represent more mundane patterns in nature such as trees, hills, rivers, plains and mountains? Why, even today, must all our gods reside outside the confines of mother Earth?

All those questions are relevant, thinks author-archaeologist Douglas Chaundy, whose fascinating work 'Ages in Miracles' is being considered for publication shortly, even though only very few students care to look too closely for an answer ... From time immemorial we find peoples of pre-history almost totally cosmologically minded. Everything they did was done with the Universe in mind. When they forgot about the way stars are fixed in the heavens, they instead incorporated into their great edifices measurements of space and time that stretched far beyond planet Earth! Whatever was done by the ancients was done for a purpose other than that for which it would normally be recognised, and much of what they built had incorporated into it a meaning structured in the Cosmos.

About 4,000 years ago a group of people entered the British Isles and, through their profound knowledge of astronomy, changed the course of history. They spread across the southern part of England an array of monuments, burial mounds and other landmarks, the impact of which up to the present century has somehow escaped detection, although their existence was buried in legend. Suddenly, within the last few decades, these monumental works of antiquity have been discovered and laid bare for all to decipher, gaze and wonder at, uncovered from the cloak of millenia for our amazement, causing us to sit back and ponder anew concerning the technology of our forebears.

Mr Chaundy says: "We have had it silently yet forcefully hammered into us that our ideas concerning the deep past of this planet must be altogether rethought out..." First came discovery of the old straight tracks, or leys, and five years later the famous Glastonbury Temple of the Stars in Somerset. But Doug Chaundy took up a novel and worthy challenge from the middle of the 1960s. Research into the Wessex Long Barrows showed him they had more to offer than mere burial mounds. Much of what the ancients accomplished was intended to have a dual meaning - and this was true of Stonehenge, the Great Pyramids and other time worn monuments. Why not these enigmatic Long Barrows? His findings astounded him, and his research, long patient hours, is more than intriguing

Here are some of his findings from the forthcoming book: "The Long Barrows of Southern England, the large wedge-shaped burial mounds, seem always to have remained an enigma. Pre-historians state they were built purely for the burial of great numbers of corpses, sometimes totalling hundreds, and remained in use for up to a century, being opened periodically for further interments. In fact there is little evidence for this... There are no long barrows to my knowledge with that amount of corpses within them. We find it stated they were built for the chieftans and high society of the building people, so it is not clear one way or the other just how they were used. There are very many such long barrows in Berkshire, Hampshire, Wiltshire, Devon, Somerset and Gloucestershire. They were built in the Neolithic period in our history somewhere about 3,000BC. This was before the Bronze Age and after the Paleolithic. People of the Windmill Hill culture erected these giant burial mounds. Long barrows are the oldest of various type barrows that festoon our land. The latter types are known as Bowl, Bell, Disc, Pond and Saucer Barrows, and all come into the category of Round Barrows. We know long barrows were used for burial, but in different ways. Later types of Round Barrows, Bell and Disc, show signs of cremation instead of inhumation. Wessex long barrows are found in an area where we find the celebrated White Horses, Stonehenge, Silbury Hill etc. Hence my statement that Southern England contains one of the greatest volumes of ancient works in the world!

"However, there is another purpose for the existence of these circular barrows, which came to light during my researches... Seen individually, Wessex long barrows have little to offer apart from the obvious enjoyment afforded those who find anything of antiquity stimulating. Seen as a whole, nonetheless, they show something truly remarkable which once more alters ideas we have of Neolithic people who put these landmarks there."

They were placed in such locations as to appear haphazard to the normal eye. Only after a long study of locations, first separately, then in individual groups, and lastly by collating various groups together as a whole, does something very unusual and quite incredible come to light. These long barrow burial mounds form familiar patterns and show Neolithic man to have had great love and knowledge of the heavens. For all of them form, with amazing precision, large numbers of the constellations of the Northern sky on the southern plains.

The constellations are in the area of the Ecliptic, are in their correct positions in relation one to another and the northern sky, and in most instances are near perfect in shape and detail.

This star field of Wessex is spread over many square miles of countryside. The beautiful southern counties are arrayed with this magnificent replica of the familiar night sky. The incredible exactness of it all is one of the finest marvels of ancient building. For it is impossible to figure out how, without modern surveying instruments and aerial surveys, this gigantic planetarium could have been laid out. The list of constellations are: Bootes, Pegasus, Cassiopeia, Ursa Minor, Ursa Major, Perseus, Taurus, Capricorn, etc. Twenty-three magnificent constellations are laid out with precision and uncanny accuracy!

Why? How was this landmarking from the heavenly bodies done so perfectly? What does it mean for us today? What did it mean for those who immediately followed the Windmill Hill and Beaker peoples of long ago? What also is the connection with the 'UFOs'!

An unidentified flying object was spotted over Eastbourne by no fewer than eight people. The object was seen by Mr & Mrs Ken Fielder as they were sitting in their garden in Upper Dukes Drive, just before midnight. With them were a group of foreign students, who also saw it and confirm Mr Fielder's story.

Said Mr Fielder: "Strangely enough we were talking about outer space, because it was such a clear sky. We were all looking up into the sky when we saw a light above the trees in the garden.

"It appeared to be just an ordinary star, then it started to drop, as if it was a shooting star; we were all watching when quite suddenly it turned red. Not a brilliant red, but definitely red.

"By this time our eyes were glued to the sky and we all rushed up to look through the window at the top of the house with binoculars. Upstairs we could see the thing more clearly. It had stopped directly above Eastbourne College and was still red in colour. It must have stayed stationary for about three minutes, and as we watched it turned from red to white again. But this time it was a very intense white. It had an incredible luminosity and glowed above the college. It was just like a theatre spotlight being directed on a certain part of the stage. Its brilliance was amazing. The strange and uncanny thing was that there was no noise whatsoever. At first we thought it might be a helicopter or aeroplane, but the night was soundless.

"As it was above the college the thing seemed to increase its size by about three times. When we first saw it, it was about the size of Venus. Gradually it started to move again and seemed to be coming straight towards us. It really was quite worrying. Then it just disappeared over the hills and we couldn't see it from the house or garden."

ARE GIANTS OF THE EARTH STILL HERE?

-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-

Thousands of years ago, by the banks of the River Chebar, the minor prophet Ezekiel saw "a wheel within a wheel, with eyes all about." His report of something inexplicable in the sky was as descriptive and accurate as any made by a witness of Unidentified Flying Objects today. An interesting point is that celestial chariots have been seen by millions of people throughout all known history on our planet, usually at times of crises, hundreds of typical instances recorded in the Holy Bible apart from the Koran, Talmud, Sanscrit writings, Tibetan documentation and Hopi Indian legends.

The modern advent of these brilliant starships in the heavens was in 1947, after man on Earth discovered how to split the atom, one of the most zealously guarded secrets of nature. Sightings have become more numerous in recent years as though UFO intelligence is mutely warning us against dangerous building up of vast stockpiles of nuclear warheads and death-dealing missiles, supposedly for defensive purposes. Continual upsurges of unrest and political instability in our world today concur with a heightening of Cosmic perception among more evolved beings.

No rational mind can deny that we live in a highly permissive society nowadays, full of the wrong sorts of personal freedom and commercially exploited to maximum degree more than ever before. Materialism is rampant everywhere, in spite or because of a sick failing World economy. Pollutive influences continue to poison out waterways. Unwise dosages of pesticides kills wildlife. Unbridled application of certain chemicals that are harmful longterm makes arable land infertile. Productive regions have become barren wildernesses or semi-desert.

On the human front conditions are just as cheerless, and pessimistically oriented. Mass bombings of property and wholesale destruction of life in many parts of the World including Northern Ireland, where son literally fights father or brother, are sharply derisive of Divine commandments. Open antagonism between Catholic and Protestant communities proves once again that sectarian differences in dogma and doctrine cause more bloodshed and unhappiness, more swelling up of false pride, than any other frictional barrier. After several outbursts of war, Arab-Israeli strife and bitterness still seethe and smoulder. Nor are these the only sorely troubled spots on our pretty little gem of a globe, as students of contemporary realise. How long can the anarchy and intolerance of present-time inhumanity last? If our flying visitors from outer space, from other dimensional worlds and levels of existence, have any affinity with the giants on our planet in earliest days as recorded in one good book, must they not be mildly concerned that our stupidity could possibly endanger the perfect balance, equilibrium, balance and harmony of our Solar system and all that therein lies?

As other authors have stressed in recent years, greater intelligences than ours were shaping the future course of this planet and its life cultures thousands of years ago. Giants of physique, intellect, wisdom, creative art, mathematics, ethics, technology, the social sciences and purposive elements in true progress. Much evidence has been uncovered that tells us unerringly that this was so: and perhaps the emergence of so many UFOs in our skies since 1947 confirms it? Let us examine further clues of a different kind that affirm without question that superior beings once roamed the Earth ...

Too many of us believe that we know almost everything today and that the ultimate horizons of our scientific and technical know-how have been reached and breached. The truth is: we are just beginning to learn, or relearn, secrets of Universal structure that were recognized many thousands of years ago by initiated people on our sphere. In Job 37:7, for example, we find that, "He sealeth the hand of every man, that all men shall know His work." So obviously, this connects with fingerprints of man, which are unique to each individual and widely used in detection of crime nowadays. But it was only in fairly recent decades that this discovery was made. Who could have finger-tipped the truth thousands of years ago?

We can quote the patient Job again, 38:35, where he is asked: "Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go and say unto thee, Here we are?" Yea, verily here is a puzzle to unravel. But "lightnings" today are synonymous with electromagnetism, powerful cosmic waves that are diffused into our atmosphere each time our native globe rotates at a speed of a thousand miles an hour on its axis while orbiting the Sun at a hundred times that rate. As yet, we know little about electricity and magnetism, gravity - wavelength and frequency of energy that surround us and permeate our very being.

For us English people, Australia marks the far end of the World. If a man broadcasts on radio or television from Sydney to London, his voice would normally take 15½ hours to reach us at the accepted speed of sound. But because of the wonderful speeding up made possible by electro-magnetism or "lightnings" referred to in ancient writings, we can hear the man speak a fraction of a second after he has done so... Yet it is the effect of the "lightnings" that is the modern miracle - and it is via the media of communication that the UFOs have stated "Here we are!" What great intelligence knew this thousands of years before radio or TV climbed out of its cat's-whisker basket? Perhaps nothing is new, except to our untutored senses?

Poor, wretched Job! What could his response have been to the question, baffling in the extreme, in 38:22: "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow? Or seen the treasures of the hail?" Today we have scientific optical proof that every single snowflake that falls has a perfect symmetry of design, unique and unparalleled. With the comparatively modern advent of the microscope, we see for the first time that there are indeed beautiful treasures in the snow and hail. Yet who could have known, and publicised the fact to Job, all those centuries ago? Reading the Bible with the proverbial third eye of understanding produces so many surprises and shocks...

Because we can see for ourselves that our first glimpse of an incoming ship is the tip of its sail or funnel above the horizon we know that our Earth is round. The proposition was only accepted generally in recent centuries, however. Before a more enlightened period dawned, people who dared to think it was thus, or even that it was not the centre of the entire Universe, were vilified or hanged as heretics and cranks. UFO enthusiasts suffer similarly when having moral courage and firmly stating they have seen something in the air which does not conform to convention and orthodoxy in scientific training and traditions. Thankfully, no one has yet been stoned to death for uttering simple truth, well, at least for a while back.

In Isaiah it is factually reported that our Earth "hangs in space," and, going back again to the hapless Job, we learn that, "it turns as the clay to the potters seal." So, thousands of years before Gallileo and the invention of telescope or spectroscope, someone knew that our planet was round and that it turns on its axis; just as clay spins on the wheel of a potter. A close study of the Bible and other holy books can be a rewarding pastime, when the mystical third eye reads between the printed lines!

Numerical values have their rightful place too, whether one counts in the Hebrew or Greek versions of the book, that is still the best-seller in world literature. A few examples at random... The New Testament was written by 8 men and consist of 8 books. Christ is mentioned in the 8 books exactly 888 times. According to experts, 888 is the numerical equivalent to Jesus (as most of us know Him), or the Greek version of Iesous, letter for letter. Jesus himself is synonymous with the figure 8. Oxygen is one of the prime prerequisites for human life. In a modern sense, its atomic number is 8 and its atomic weight is 16 (8 x 2). Also oxygen is made up of 8 protons, 8 neutrons and 8 electrons, thus making 888.

Everything material and man-made is purely temporary, even the stoutest castle or palace. But things of the spirit - which came and manifested long before science in the scale of things Universal - are permanent and lasting, their value immeasurably greater. (Recently a communication from an extra-terrestrial refered to Warminster as "area 8", but whether this was just this location, the whole of Wessex one does not know? John Michell in his book 'City of Revelation' shows the messages of ancient stones which refer to the coming significance of this Wiltshire/Somerset countryside).

It may appear an outrageous statement that the things we cannot see, the invisible and amorphous and largely unknown territories beyond human ken, are the most powerful building blocks in the Universal structure. Fill your lungs with air... You cannot do without this wonderful inflow of energising oxygen, in a carbon-based body, yet it is invisible to our gaze. Similarly with electromagnetism, soundwaves and electrical frequencies whose fringe of usefulness we are barely scratching at in the present so-called advanced era of our civilization. Our eyes, which cannot see beyond the spectra of the infra-red and ultra-violet because they are limited and circumscribed in fields of vision, are matched by our hearing and other senses: so that we are blind and deaf to the vibrant energies of life-forms that exist in varied dimensions and scales of evolution all around us.

In a carbon-based body, our atoms have a certain polarity. Could there not be entities whose atoms lie in parallel, maybe constituting a parallel Universe to our own? We do not know for sure yet, although clues may well be found in the ancient writings waiting for someone to break the code of revelation and find the key.

"My religion consists of a humble admiration of the illimitable superior spirit who reveals himself in the slight details we are able to perceive with our frail and feeble minds. That deeply emotional conviction of the presence of a superior reasoning power which is revealed in the incomprehensible Universe, forms my idea of God.

Restricting the body of knowledge to a small group deadens the philosophical spirit of a people and leads to spiritual poverty.

The most beautiful and most profound emotion we can experience is the sensation of the mystical. It is the sower of all true science. He to whom this emotion is a stranger, who can no longer wonder and stand rapt in awe, is as good as dead. To know that what is impenetrable to us really exists, manifesting itself as the highest wisdom and the most radiant beauty which our dull faculties can comprehend only in their most primitive forms ... this knowledge, this feeling, is at the centre of true religiousness.

"The cosmic religious experience is the strongest and noblest mainspring of scientific research.

I cannot believe that God plays dice with the world."

3-4-1976 Mr Leonard Cramp told the IW Astronomical Society that on statistics alone there must be millions of civilisations in the universe and thousands could be close to us.

Developing the theme, he said there was already a growing acceptance of new theories of the existence of all matter and that everything was based on wave-lengths. If this was the case, instant travel to any part of the universe would be possible.

There was a time when such theories would have been dismissed as nonsense or as providing material only for science fiction stories or boys comics. But in these days of scientific marvels answers to some of the mysteries of heaven and earth are being found. Those who scan the skies at night hoping to sight a flying saucer should not be disappointed if they observe only the great peace of the infinite, the enduring serenity of those starry regions. It is reassuring to see that ancient tranquillity undisturb

Without reservation this new book shortly to be available in the UK via Fountain Centre is the best ever compilation of all the available close contact data on UFOs. With material drawn from over sixty well established books and new encounter reports a startling and well documented picture emerges. Are the human race related to this distant civilisation, and are we even now far deeper involved than we think?

Prof. Holzer answers many of these questions with a detective like skill drawing on his many years researches into borderland subjects. Highly recommended. Price to be advised.
