The second letter regarding the 'man' who called Earth,
'Cantel'.

Dear Editor,

You may think that half past two in the morning is a funny time to be writing a letter but I am trying to get all the facts down about a recurrence of the 'visit' I had a few weeks back.

It began in the same manner; my room being illuminated by a red glow. Again, sitting on my bed, as if he belonged there was the same 'man' I had encountered on my earlier experience. Nothing about him had changed; he still wore the same shirt and trousers and still maintained the same stubble on his chin.

He was thumbing through an old copy of a Bible that I possessed. The 'man' gazed at me for a while and then said, "Does this concern the Universal Spirit of Truth, that which you call God?"

I told him that it was, and, at his request, told him as much as I knew about ideas of God. I was then expecting him to reveal what their idea of God was but no such reply came. He again sat in silence, starrng at the closed book. I felt that I must find out more about him and so I began by asking him his name. He said that he was called 'Lenston'.

I asked why he had chosen to speak to me instead of, say a scientist. His reply was that almost anybody could have been chosen, but it seemed to them that I was typical of Earth people, always fighting for survival.

There were so many things that I wanted to know, but before I had a chance to ask them the 'man' faded away, and as before appeared on the opposite side of the room, looking at my 3 1/2" reflector. The 'man' then disappeared again.

I sat up, spellbound, waiting for him to appear again, but after sitting up motionless for about ten minutes, watching the red light diminish, I realised that he would not appear again.

I then went down stairs to fetch a glass of water, the temperature was back to normal and everything seemed as it was.

My first thought in the morning was that it was all a dream, but I soon realised that this was not true, as, during fetching the water, I remembered stubbing my toe on the stairs which made a pretty big bruise. >Letter 3 in Journal

THE FOUNTAIN CENTRE

STAR HOUSE

Dear Readers,

First may I welcome all our new readers to the Fountain Journal, the publication produced by the Fountain Centre.

Second may I apologise to our regular readers for being late with No.8 which should have been out in February, however we have been dealing with over 2000 letters which have come in, and as a good percentage of these contained very interesting material we felt we would hold No.8 and include many of the letters. We have so many reports that these will continue to appear in No.9 and 10 (or which No.9 will be out in March).

As promised we have expanded No.8 by the addition of the No.8 Special Supplement, which has been sent to everyone who wrote in. This effectively produces a 36 page mag. for No.8, four more pages than the promised 32, and I ask our old readers, for the inclusion of a few repeat items, to forgive me, as these we felt would be of particular interest to new readers. Also the Journal 'departments' have been cut down in this edition to allow the maximum inclusion of new sightings reports. But let me reassure regulars that the departments, which have proved to popular, will return to normal size in No.9 which will be back to normal size, 24 pages and will be coming through the letter box soon.

We have also included in the supplement a coupon for joining the Fountain Centre Association, and remember you are not a member until you have sent in the form, with your renewal, and been given a member No. Branches are opening now, see supplement Page 4.

WINCHESTER LANDING - CONFIRMATION ?

-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-O-

Readers will remember that we were the first magazine to print the encounter case of Mrs Joyce Bowles and Mr Ted Prat in our No.6, Christmas Edition. In No.7, under title of "UK FLAP" we detailed the contact case of Mrs J and Mr T. As this has now appeared on television we can confirm that the two persons concerned are the same. Mrs Bowles having phoned Fountain Centre half an hour after the contact in which they met the 'visitors'.

Two letters have now arrived which tend to confirm this event, and these are printed below:

Dear Sir,

I live in Southampton. Just a short time ago, some people reported a UFO on the Winchester bypass. On the same night I was travelling home from my girlfriends house. I saw what I would swear on any oath to be a UFO. It was 11pm, and I was about 3 miles from the bypass, on a hill.

I have seen reflections from other car lights on mist or fog, or even on the clouds. Eastleigh has an airport, so I know a plane with its flashing red & green lights, and also its white headlights. What I saw was none of these. I'm not a drinker either.

Coming across from the bypass area - an orange red light at about 100ft high, not flashing but glowing like a main street light, hard to focus on. It was round sort of loaf shaped. So silent, because I slowed down in my car and coasted to see if I could hear any noise. It came towards me went over my car and disappeared in the Petersfield direction over the wooded area. Yours, Charles Previtt.

S.W. Freemantle of Southampton writes:

Back in January I went and investigated the sight of the reported landing of a space craft at Chilcombe, at the end of the Winchester By-Pass... I spent about two hours there on the Wens. morning and after a while found a few faint foot prints leading from the field where the craft landed to the point where the car went up on the grass. They were about our size with plain soles, but each one was about 6" or so longer in the stride than our average stride. If they were 'his' then he must have been quite tall with a long stride. I was asked not to go into the field as it was ploughed where the craft was reported landed about 75yds from the edge and there seemed to be a depression in this area about 20ft across, but as we had had a lot of rain it was very difficult to tell.

Still I enjoyed my two hours of searching around. >

Southern Television did an excellent half hour report on the above, and the only pity is that it was not put out on the national network. * * *

If you were introduced to a UFO spotter, you might well feel inclined to start the conversation with references to little green men saying: "Take me to your leader." But conversational gambits like that don't go down well in Warminster, Wiltshire.

Apparently UFOs round Warminster are as common as jumbo jets at Heathrow. In the 1960s, especially, aliens in their flying machines seemed to take an extra interest in this part of the country.

People told of being wakened at night by loud rattling sounds on their roofs. Others claimed they were pinned, paralysed, to the ground by strange force fields. Motorist reported inexplicable things going wrong with their cars.

With my head full of stories of mysterious, unexplained goings-on, you'll understand that I felt rather nervous as I set off to join a band of enthusiasts who hold a Saturday night vigil in the hills round Warminster.

Leaders of the expedition were Peter and Jane Paget, who run a UFO information centre in Warminster. Jane is 26, petite and pretty, and very interested in that other kind of star-gazing - astrology. Both she and Peter are convinced that UFOs exist, and they are a mine of information about our interplanetary visitors.

Dressed for Arctic conditions, I arrived at their home appropriately called Star House - at 8.30 p.m. I was the tenth to arrive for a before-the-watch discussion. There would be safety in numbers, I hoped.

"What's the weather like?" asked Peter.

"A bit cloudy," someone replied.

The team assembled, we trooped into a convoy of three cars - destination Cradle Hill, about a mile away up a steep muddy, narrow lane. By nine o'clock we were looking out over the dark countryside, and the comforting lights of Warminster.

and its army base. The urge to keep looking over my shoulder was almost irresistible.

Two enthusiastic watchers, 17-year-old gardener Terry Chivers, and his cousin, 22-year-old Bridget Chivers, were already there.

Bridget, binoculars slung round her neck, was fiddling with a small box-like object. "It's a UFO detector," she explained to me. "When a UFO goes overhead the magnetic field changes and a needle moves, touching this loop which sets off a buzzer." Clever stuff, but compared to the wonders of technology that UFOs and their crews must have at their fingertips, I couldn't help wonder if this comparatively simple device would be a match for the watchers from outer space.

Terry and Bridget spend most of their Saturday nights on Cradle Hill. "We've been keen on UFOs for about two years now," said Terry. "Our best sighting was in our back garden two years ago. We saw a cigar-shaped object travelling quite low. We have also seen some red lights which we watched for five minutes before they suddenly disappeared."

Uncanny sights are not the only disconcerting experiences UFO watchers report. Bridget remembered one night on Cradle Hill: "We heard a crackling sound coming across the fields. We couldn't see anything, but next morning some watchers went back and found the corn in the field had been flattened."

It was now 10.15 and the sky was still clouded. Would we see anything in these conditions? "I have a feeling we will," said Ray Darrell, a tall, good-looking 32-year-old, who as managing director of an aircraft charter firm at Woking, Surrey.

Ray is a recent convert. On his first visit to Warminster he went to Cley Hill, another favourite watching spot, and saw a moving flashing light. "We saw about 30 satellites going over and then this light. I know the difference between a satellite and a UFO, and what we saw was not a satellite or any kind of plane."

Teeth chattering ever so slightly, though from nerves or the cold I'm not prepared to say, I talked to two other watchers, Barry and Judy Gooding. They told me about a local farmer at Chapmanslade, near Warminster in 1974.

"He saw what he thought was the moon over Cley Hill. But a yellow glowing sphere came towards him, until it was only 300 yards away, flying level with some treetops about 60 feet high."

Barry and Judy couldn't stay for the all-night vigil- they had to go back to let the baby-sitter go home- a bit of a slap in the face for any tuned-in alien to know that human affairs come first.

I asked Peter Paget why Warminster was so popular with UFO pilots. "Well, it looks as if routes converge here. You can watch a UFO arrive then go off in another direction, like a motorway interchange."

A sort of celestial spaghetti junction?

"This area is the most aeri-ally haunted in the country. People come here from America, Canada, Australia to investigate UFOs. We set up our centre, The Fountain Centre, because we thought it was time people had a place to contact for information about sightings, where to watch, where to stay."

But what are these spacecraft doing here? "I believe they are acting as advisers and trying to give us guidance," said Peter. "They don't want an atomic war. Man now has the ability to change his environment and something like an atomic war on Earth would affect other planets."

Wiltshire isn't only a mecca for UFOs. Ancient man seemed to find it just as irresistible, and built monuments like Stonehenge, the Avebury Circle, Silbury Hill and the Westbury White Horse to prove it.

Some people think there's a connection between these and the UFOs. What we think of as ancient burial mounds may have had another purpose. They form definite patterns based on large numbers of constellations. (Editors Note: To be detailed in a new book by author, Doug Chaundy, 'Ages in Miracles'; hopefully to be published by Abacus. Peter.) Did neolithic man have help from aliens to build these Landmarks to guide them on their way on future visits?

Many who say UFOs landed here in ancient times point to Biblical references- other worlds and angels. Could they mean outer space? Peter believes UFOs have visited earth for eons of years, and that space people are here to help, possibly by giving telepathic guidance.

There are less comforting theories: that to the aliens we're just an experimental colony, or animals in a zoo. Or that they're waiting for us to blow ourselves up so they can take over the world.

Suddenly Ray pointed to a whitish glow coming up over
